Conference City: Rome, Italy

Rome is the capital city of Italy and is located in the central-western part of the country. It is one of the most historically rich cities in the world and is famous for its stunning architecture, art, and ancient ruins.

Rome is home to many iconic landmarks such as the Colosseum, the Pantheon, the Roman Forum, and the Trevi Fountain. The Vatican City, an independent city-state located within Rome, is also home to the famous St. Peter's Basilica and the Sistine Chapel.

Apart from its historical significance, Rome is also known for its delicious cuisine, including pizza, pasta, gelato, and wine. Visitors can also enjoy shopping in its fashionable boutiques and markets, as well as experiencing the lively nightlife scene.

Rome is easily accessible by air, with two international airports serving the city. There is also an extensive public transportation system, including buses and the metro, which make it easy to navigate around the city.

Why to visit Rome in October?

October is an optimal time to experience the allure of Rome. The weather is mild, with temperatures ranging from 18-25°C (64-77°F), creating a comfortable atmosphere for exploring the city's rich history. The crowds have significantly diminished compared to peak tourist season, allowing for a more intimate encounter with iconic sites like the Colosseum, Vatican City, and the Pantheon. The autumn foliage enhances the city's beauty, casting a warm, golden glow over its historic streets and landmarks. Moreover, October brings cultural festivities, such as the Rome Film Fest and the Chestnut Festival, adding vibrancy to your visit. The local cuisine is at its finest, with seasonal delicacies like fresh truffles and hearty Roman dishes readily available. The ambiance is relaxed, making it an ideal time to savor authentic Italian experiences, from leisurely strolls through charming neighborhoods to indulging in alfresco dining at traditional trattorias. In essence, Rome in October promises a delightful blend of cultural richness, culinary delights, and comfortable exploration.
